

Erie Veterans Win Recognition for 1939 Gains

The Marion chapter of the Erie Railroad Veterans' association has been awarded a plaque in recognition of having the largest percentage increase in membership in the entire association during 1939. Leo A. Keller, yardmaster here and chairman of the chapter, announced today.

The Marion chapter boosted its membership by 71.7 per cent last year, more than any other chapter. The increase brought the membership to 180. The chapter serves the Kent division.

The plaque, sent here by J. R. Ward of Dunmore, Pa., general secretary of the association, will be circulated among various groups of employees affiliated with the association, such as yardmen, engineers and the like. This policy has been adopted so that all the members will share in the plaque, the association not having any permanent meeting place where the plaque could be kept.

The veterans' association is open only to Erie employees with 20 or more consecutive years of service. Officers of the Marion chapter in addition to Mr. Keller are C. A. Crim, Erie agent, who is vice chairman, and Lawrence Fletcher, secretary and treasurer.

The chapter has already made plans for its 1940 membership campaign.

Culinary secrets. Success secrets. How to get them? The best friend hesitates to tell the knack of blending her flaky pastry. Why don't her feathery cakes fall? What is the secret of her fragrant coffee?

Even the fondest neighbor is reluctant to have an onlooker during her baking session. Yet nothing simplifies a cooking problem more readily than watching an expert at work.

The friendly Cooking School specialist will welcome a full audience of neighbors at the baking, broiling and frying operations in her model kitchen. Watch her measuring and blending with trained skill, cutting time and labor. Bring your questions to her for sage counsel. And bring notebooks and pencils to record her advice. Every minute will be worth-while during these carefully-planned demonstrations of household hospitality.

Thurber, An Ohio Product, Writes a Play

This Thurber Drawing Shows Thurber and Nugent at Work

By JACK STINNETT
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — James Thurber has not been leaving his mind alone (as he counseled others to do) a few years ago in one of those chuckling tomes he dashes off at intervals. With the spur and disciplinary guidance of Collaborator Elliott Nugent, he has yanked from his pale one of Broadway's maddest comedies. What the former wit of Ohio State did for the New Yorker magazine and contemporary literature with his cartoon-and-word sketches, he now has done for the stage with "The Male Animal"—which has playgoers holding their sides but not their pocketbooks.
Although still a young man, Thurber is almost a New York legend. As in the case of Dorothy Parker, if he thought up all the witticisms attributed to him, he would have no time for cartoons.

This Photograph Shows James Thurber at Work

and sketches. And if he authored all those practical jokes there would be nothing but goats in his flock of friends.

He's Like His Hero

Actually, he is a painfully lank fellow, with a brush of graying hair and a nervous demeanor that is comical only in its seriousness. When in New York (he has a country place in Connecticut), he lives in an ordinary hotel apartment, works on a plain card table, over which he hunches, his nose close to the paper, to compensate for his near-sightedness.
"I must be out of drawing paper," he calls to his wife in the next room, whereupon Mrs. T. puts in an appearance and patiently shows him that the cabinet of the desk, where it is usually kept, is well stocked. Or, "I wonder why the publishers didn't send that anthology?" he wonders. And Mrs. Thurber hands it to him from the bookcase with the comment that he received it himself at the door that morning. Each episode seems never to ruffle the Thurbers' calm. Probably by now, it's an old Thurber custom.

When he and co-author Nugent had got their play on Broadway, the latter commented: "I used to think the Nugents were the maddest people in the world. But I worked with Thurber! Perhaps—but it seems there's a good deal of sanity mixed up in the Thurber madness."

Thurber Solves a Problem
For all its foolishness and hilarity, "The Male Animal" is a forceful plea for intelligent liberalism in our colleges and the only successful dramatic effort we have seen yet to point out that it's just possible that education might be more important than football. Those are hardly the preachments of madmen.

There is a story, too, that shortly after Harold Ross of the New Yorker had hired Thurber as his managing editor, he received a letter from an irate advertiser, storming over the placement of an ad. Ross took the letter to Thurber, laid it on his desk and asked: "What am I going to do about this?"
"The hell with it," said Thurber, brushing it off into the wastebasket.

"Brilliant!" shouted Mr. Ross. "I never would have thought of that. My new managing editor is a genius." Publishers who have tried to placate irate advertisers over ad placements undoubtedly will agree.

As for the writing of the play, Thurber says the idea came to him one day on top of his garage. He'd forgotten what he was doing on top of the garage but he doesn't think he went up there to get an idea for a play.

The idea, he says, was just for the first scene. He hired Elliott Nugent in Hollywood: "You and I are going to write a play. 'Elliott' going back: 'No, we're not.' 'So,' Thurber says, 'I went to Hollywood, showed him the scene. He sighed, sat down and began cutting it out. The collaboration was on.'"

His Friends Were Amazed
Thurber says all of his friends were amazed when he sat down at the typewriter to write dialogue. But they shouldn't have been. At Ohio State, where he and Nugent were fraternity brothers (Phi Psi), and they managed to get a few plugs for the old order into their play, the two vowed they some day would do a drama.

After college, when Elliott started acting with the rest of the Nugent clan and writing plays with his father, J. C. Nugent, Thurber went into newspaper work in Columbus and for four years wrote the plays for the university players, the Maskers, and helped produce and tour them around the state.

It took him some 15 years more to get around to fulfilling that vow with his college chum. But "The Male Animal" was worth waiting for. The sign of the house physician at the Cori theater notes that since the play opened there he has treated four cases of female hysteria and one of male prostration.

Father George

RIDICULE has cooled some of the ardor of backward-looking for preaching on what George Washington would say if he were alive, as well as for quelling what he did say as though he were alive. The father of his country probably would be as confused if he were set down in 20th century America as most of its current crop of guardians seems to be.

Nevertheless, there were qualities in George Washington that bear a vast deal of backward looking. One in particular would come in handy, along with a revival of Abraham Lincoln's humil-ility. It is steadfastness, the quality that made a man who had everything to lose and precious little to gain from what he was doing able to want he started out to do.

There was nothing ephemeral or shifty about Father George. He was as dependable as the good, rich soil of Mt. Vernon. Almost single-handed he founded a national tradition of sticking to the job (III) it was doing, one of the foundation stones on which his countryman to come managed to build a great nation. The stone is still there for those who know what to do with it. It made a great man of George Washington, it contributed to the greatness of Abraham Lincoln and it's still usable.

Premature Gloating

TWO facts, as well known to newspaper readers in the United States as to the zealous propagandists of Soviet Russia, give the lie to a boast that Finland will be wrenched up in time for the red army's 22nd anniversary celebration on Friday.

The boast presumes that the Mannerheim line will be cracked wide open by the end of the week. That is doubtful. Moreover, if the line is penetrated, Russia still has not won a victory over Finland. It merely has placed the Finns at a further disadvantage in a war whose disadvantages have been turned to Finland's account as often as not.

The second fact is Russia's widely advertised,
frequently demonstrated reputation for bungling.
The German army conceivably might crush Finland in a few more days. The Russian army conceivably might not crush Finland at all. An increasing number of signs, chiefly the growing anxiety of Sweden and Norway over their neutrality, point to imminent Russian victory. But in drawing a deadline at Friday the hammerers and sickers remind watchers that the war was to have been fought and won in a few weeks
when it started a few weeks ago.

Thin Skins

THE Altmärk incident, which would have been just another war story but for the Nazi government's indignation, illustrates a strange trait in German military character.

Apparently the skins of Teutonic fighting men have become thinner in ratio to the thickening of armor plate. Else, why should Germany even profess to be shocked by British "lawlessness" in relieving the Altmärk of its prisoners? Does Germany expect the world to believe it would have let a British prison ship bearing sailors of its destroyed vessels proceed unmolested because of a technicality over the ship's position?

It was Germany that protested in the first World War because Belgian civilians were un-neutral after German troops were on Belgian soil. It was Germany that protested in the current war because Polish civilians, who had been bombed from the air, took out their spite in sniping on German troops. The greatest exponent of totalitarian warfare does its protesting with bad grace. Having taught its enemies to expect no mercy, it professes to have a legal claim on mercy.

Sweden's "Neutrality"

ON THE theory that Russia's invasion of Finland is for the purpose of controlling the Gulf of Finland, a military measure, Sweden has little to fear from Soviet trespassing on its part of the Scandinavian peninsula. Separated from Finland by the Gulf of Bothnia and lying entirely within Germany's orbit of influence, Sweden has reasonable security as far as danger from Russia is concerned. It has nothing Russia needs, but much that Germany needs and is getting without recourse to war.

Consequently, it is not surprising that Sweden has declared intention to preserve its "neutrality," meaning its present state of assurance that it is safe from Russia. Sweden may volunteer to fight for Finland, Swedish supplies may be sent to Finland, Sweden's popular and official sympathies may belong to Finland, but Sweden will not go to war with Russia unless its own territory is threatened.

The plight of Sweden and all other neutrals in Europe is pathetic. Without exception they are in acute danger, yet dare not act to defend their long range interests lest they, too, be made victims of force. The collective security they dreamed of after the first World War has been transformed into collective insecurity by the collapse of good faith among strong governments.

News Behind the News

Reds Find Weakness of Mannerheim Manner of Defense; Finns Seen Doomed.

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—The Helsinki spokesmen must have winced when they handed out the headlines that Finland was retreating to a stronger defensive position. Their strongest position is anywhere they happen to be at the moment. No one section of their Mannerheim line is stronger than any other section.

The line has every where a hole in the ground to what is called "a strong point,"
which is a concrete fort. These forts are scattered on varying terrain throughout the whole depth of the line, and not in rows. They are supported by pill boxes and concrete trenches.

So when the Finns concede the Russians are approaching Viipuri, they mean they have been driven out of possibly one-third of their defensive line. They mean they still hold two-thirds of it, which is just as tough but no tougher than the part they lost.

The Finns seemed doomed. Inner implications of the latest diplomatic developments mean they are not going to dig their outside aid, if they could get 50-000 to 100,000 trained troops, 250 to 500 more planes, and some field artillery, they might hold out indefinitely, but this is now out of the question.

A normally efficient attack force could reduce the remainder of the Mannerheim line and march into Helsinki within a month or six weeks. The Germans, British or French could do it, but the Russians are not a normal army.
The Russians have never won a war in modern history. They fumbled themselves out of the Russo-Japanese conflict. They caved in at Tannenberg, Lodz and Cracow in the World War, when even an only mildly efficient army might have had victory.

They might take six weeks to six months to get to Helsinki.

Discovery
The Reds at last have found the weakness of the Mannerheim manner of defense. Their latest successful strategy has been to concentrate the heaviest possible
artillery fire, for days or weeks
if necessary, upon the advance Finnish positions. Great squads of bombing planes cooperate with the artillery line, but have not proved as effective as they hoped.
In making the Finnish positions uninhabitable. Resistance can thus be broken down for mass infantry storming troops, as there are no deep underground hideaways, safe from shell fire, as on the French-German front.

The Finns have been working energetically to improve their improving the bugle line defenses.
These now run all the way up the Isthmus front to the outskirts of Helsinki, but they are strong up to a north-south line from Helsinki down to Kotka on the gulf. This rough line is approximately half way between Viipuri and Helsinki, and will undoubtedly be the line of their last stand.

Their cause will be aided by that which is imminent, coming usually in March. Soft ground will slow down the movement of artillery and troops, but perhaps only to a minor degree.

Call-Calling
The British and French were apparently sincere this time in arranging three weeks ago to send troops. They did not intend to let Finland go like Czechoslovakia and Poland, but several things happened. Hitler massed troops in Danzig threatening to go into Finland on the Russian side if the Allies moved there. Allied invasion from the last (Petersburg or Murmansk) would mean Allied war against Russia. Sweden's king refused transportation across his country. All routes in, therefore, were diplomatically closed, leaving Finland to its fate.

The British are beginning to cry out that Sweden let them down by a new secret agreement with Russia (and thus also with Germany) guaranteeing Swedish territory. This is only call-calling to cover British embarrassment.
Whatever Swedish-Russian understanding exists is old.

Altmärk
Hitler's propagandists are trying to justify their Altmärk rage by showing that the United States
let the British take a captured German ship filled with steam prisoners through our territorial waters, the Panama Canal.
It may make good propaganda, but not sound reasoning. The facts of that case were never brought to full light because the Germans never even protested to Washington.

British captured the German merchantman Duesendort off Valparaiso and took the captured ship through the Panama Canal with out permission of the United States.
One of the German civilian prisoners aboard, the Happy-Lloyd agent, feigned illness, refused to enter the Canal Zone hospital and demanded that he be taken to a hospital in another nation, Panama. His wish was granted, but when the Panama government authorities found he was not ill, they —not the Americans—returned him to his British captors.

All this was done under the Hiny-Panucolet treaty of 1901, which specifically authorizes belligerent warships and captured prizes to use the Panama Canal.
The German consul in Panama protested, but no formal German complaint was ever made to Washington.

House of Morgan Change

Incorporated State Bank To Take Place of Private Partnership

CHANGES in the house of Morgan during a century of existence have been few and far between. Consequently, when it was announced last week that on April 1 the firm would change from a private banking partnership to an incorporated state bank, the news excited deep interest. What did it mean? Is there something happening to one of America's most famous banking
institutions?

Chief purpose
of the change,
as far as can be seen immediately,
is to provide more stable banking. It is something happening to one of America's most famous banking
institutions?

J. P. Morgan continually to the firm's existence. Heretofore it has been necessary to dissolve the partnership and create a new one each time a partner died or retired, or a new partner was admitted. Since the ages of the present leading partnership range from 14 to 72, more than only that steps are being taken to assure the firm's stability.

The house of Morgan has usually concentrated on the particular phase of economic development at any given period. Junius
S. Morgan, grandfather of the present J. P. Morgan Sr., was a member of the firm of Peabody and Co. of London. Before the Civil War, British capital investments in American investments;
Peabody and Co. was active in this type of transaction.
In 1863, the firm name was changed to Morgan and Co.

Junius established his eldest son, John Pierpont, as an independent banker in New York, where he represented his father's firm. In 1864 the son became a member of the banking firm of Dabney, Morgan and Co. Both the London and New York firm speculated in gold during the Civil War, incurring much criticism and subsequently a public investigation.

J. P. Morgan was active in financing business reorganizations in the reconstruction period. In 1871 he united with the Drexels of Philadelphia to found the firm of Drexel, Morgan and Co., which became J. P. Morgan and Co. in 1895.

THE MORGAN firm was invaluably associated with railroad development. It rose to national prominence and financial leadership in 1895 when J. P. Morgan formed a syndicate to restore the government's depleted gold reserves, on terms that caused more criticism and another investigation.

All the turn of the century J.
P. Morgan organized U. S. Steel Corp., then the world's largest business unit. The firm's foreign interests expanded. In the panic of 1907 the firm's hand was laid beyond dispute his reputation as leader in business and finance. Treasury Secretary Corbory declared later that bankers and businessmen looked to Morgan for guidance, acted under his directions, depended on him to find a way out.

Mr. Morgan testified in 1912, the year before his death, before the Pujo (money trust) subcommittee of the house committee on commerce and currency. One of his statements that attracted wide attention was that character is more important than assets in Wall street. He said he frequently had lent more than a million to a man who didn't have a penny,
but that he wouldn't lend a penny to a man he didn't trust, though he might be backed up by all the bonds in Christendom.

THE present J. P. Morgan Sr. testified in 1915 before the industrial relations commission.
One of his statements that created a stir was in reply to a query if $10 a week was enough for an international mercenary, longshoreman to earn. "I do not know, sir," he replied. "If that is all he can get and he takes, I should say it was enough."

Altmärk Incident Seen as Evidence That This Is an "Individualistic" War.

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

I DON'T know what the international law is regarding the rescue of British prisoners from the Altmärk, a German ship in Norwegian territorial waters. I guess it's about the same as the international law under which the German chancellor ordered the Austrian chancellor to resign, otherwise it's a country would be invaded in 80
minutes; or the international law
under which the Nazis organized a revolution in Czechoslovakia
and then ordered the Czech government to hand power over to them, otherwise they would be invaded; or the international law
under which the German government confiscated the Czech and Austrian treasures and stole the money in them, some of which belonged to us; or the international law under which Russia attacked Finland on the ground that she was defending herself against a Finnish assault; or the international law under which the Japanese are not making war in China by spreading disease, or the international law under which the Russians and the Germans organize Americans inside the United States while their paid agents agitate them, at present to pacificism, under the portraits of Washington or Lincoln.

International law in this world
at present is whatever any nation has the power to do. A little English girl was recently asked in class for the definition of a neutral, and she said, "A small country that is in danger." Small neutrals make their policies not according to international law but according to what they feel.
No international law prevents the Swedes from sending an army to Finland, nor does the fear of Russia, Finland's enemy, do so. But the Swedes are afraid that if they send an army to Finland some one else, the British or the Germans, will send an army to Sweden.

Two Varieties
There is one international law for the strong and another for the weak, as the Germans have been demonstrating. International law, like Napoleon's God, is on the side of the biggest battalions. Or, as one says to the taxi driver who argues that it was the other fellow's fault: Being right doesn't do you much good if you are dead.
Undeclared wars are against international law, but if there is a war, and one side goes in for violating international law, it is difficult for the other side to win it by looking every time in the book.

In the incident over the City of Pint international law was on our side, but if this country had been Denmark, it would not have been.
International law aside, the rescue of the prisoners from the Altmärk reminds us that in this mechanized, organized, socialized, communized and highly anti-individualistic world individual initiative still counts—and even in the most socialized and mechanized manifestation of this world, namely war.

The rescue of the prisoners from the Altmärk was very old-fashioned, almost Victorian. Such a battle might have occurred at any time, in history, since the invention of firearms. The weapons were chiefly nerve and pistols.
This war was heralded as the horrible triumph of mechanics over men. Apocalyptic pictures were painted of a war on men by robots of mass slaughters by metallic monsters. A mechanized society would make mechanized war and finally blot out the race of humans. Mass slaughter by super-mechanics was to be the end of Homo sapiens.

Maybe. But so far this has been a peculiarly individualistic war. The chief warriors are seamen, fighting very much as seamen have fought for generations
—battles in which personal courage, quickness and intelligence determine the victory or defeat as much as they ever did.

Or aviators, fighting alone or with a comrade or two, high in the blue air. The competing armies gauging their relative strengths compare not only their numbers
but the quality of the men and the quality of the machines they have made. Neither in men nor in machines is mass production the measuring rod. Germany outnumbers Britain and France locally in the number of planes she possesses. But her pilots are most of them, kids, and the French pilots, who have been navigating the air for twenty years, fight with pink-faced Nazi boys whose air experience is so limited that a French pilot the other day abandoned a fight because he couldn't bear to kill the youngerster he saw floundering around in the air in the enemy machine.

The story is comforting. It is pleasant to think that an adult has an advantage over a youth
in this youth-affirming world;
that acquired skill, mature judgment and the realistic courage of the grown-up have a better than even chance against youthful impetuosity, idealism and violence.
It is an argument why men should be encouraged to grow up at all.

Mechanical Differences
Even the machines have varying personalities. The German Messerschmitt was heralded in a manner to evoke terror. It looks very impressive indeed. But it quails before the cocky Curtiss
P. 38 from the United States, with its far greater elasticity and maneuverability. The qualities of the free man's plane are the qualities of the free man—elasticity and maneuverability. Perhaps, one thinks, free men are even more efficient than the mobilized mass.
The German war-heroes are the men in submarines, a profession that requires enormous personal courage and heroism. It also requires something more than blind obedience, which may be the reason why a leading citizen of the German concentration camps is a former U-boat commander.

On Borrowed Time

Patient Horatio Z. Taxpayer I Presidential Candidates Seek New Job at His Expense.

By DAMON RUNYON

WE WOULD like to be a candidate for president of the United States, but we cannot spare the time or money. We work for a stereotype man Horatio Z. Taxpayer.

If we went hoozooching about the country in the interests of our cause, our boss we soon be saying, see here, fellow, I do not m-you looking for a new job, but do not do it on my time. Kindly devote yourself during office hours to the purpose for which I hired you, or hand in your resignation.

Perhaps he would not wait for our resignation. Perhaps he would lurk outside a meeting hall in which we were about to address our fellow citizens on his time and give us the nine of spades in person. That would remove us from his payroll and hence from our daily ration of hog wall and greens, Damon Runyon and we would soon be too weak to continue our race.

It would be different if we worked for Hor-atio Z. Taxpayer. We notice quite a number of public officials in the employ of Horatio are running for president on his time. Others are not actually running are sitting still this ing the lightning may strike them. Several members of cabinet officers, a number of errors, a posse of United States senators, couple of congressmen and at least one con-
district attorney are candidates for presid-and giving much attention to their candidabut at the same time are remaining on Hor-atio Z. Taxpayer's salary list.

We mention this not in criticism but in en-vvy. It is a nice thing to be able to eat your cake and have it, too.

IT IS possible some of Horatio's employees salary while absent from their offices private business. We have no definite data this point, though we are sure the practice not common. However, we understand this only because medical men have strongly ad-against any tendency toward salaried members of Horatio Z. Taxpayer's staff un-any circumstances. They fear the shock of a prise would just about kill Horatio.

He does not even require employees to leave of absence to go gallivanting about presidential pursuits. They just pick up their bags and go. We presume they turn their over to capable subordinates and Horatio Taxpayer never squeaks. Another and a mea-employer might say that the subordinates were okay, he had picked the principles of their unique and peculiar ability and paid enough to warrant having their services at times.

About the only presidential candidate
before the public who are not working Horatio Z. Taxpayer's time are Herbert Hoover and Frank Gannett, the newspaper boss.
Still there was a period when Mr. Hoover, an active employee of Horatio, did use some Horatio's time for his own personal affairs.
That was when Mr. Hoover was campaigning for a second term.

WHEN we speak of Mr. Hoover as a private candidate, we are not understanding of the fact that he has not avowed his candidacy. Neither has he avowed to appear in on, as far as we are concerned, if they do say no, we must assume they mean yes, but we must admit that in Mr. Hoover's case it is extenuating circumstances for silence.

Mr. Hoover knows from experience what avowed candidate for president must end Perhaps he wishes to delay the ordeal as as possible. For instance, there are the pho-graphs with the homespun touches which ready are commencing to appear in the papers. Mr. Hoover never could get much hospun into his pictures because of his years urban training and environment. He probably felt pretty silly trying to appear homespun.
As a matter of fact, it looks as if we going to be in tough shape for homespun rterials among presidential candidates this son. Nearly all of them are the well tail-type and the first homespun pictures are so hot. Only Jack Warner gets away fairly in the homespun we have seen so far. He is almost homespun enough in hunting garb make us forget he really is a banker.

THE leaning-on-the-rail-fence photos in fr-
of the old homestead have been run throon some candidates, but they are not unusually impressive. Nor can we have about of the shirt sleeves, snare, we have seen, especially as in most cases we can spot the shirt custom made at $15 per copy. The family-cir-sets with children in apple-pie poses are better than usual, either. Even the fishing
tures are just ordinary.

One thing about the family-circle photos, if are suitable for almost every candidate has children or grandchildren, though we could see how these photos enhance a candidate's prospects. We think a couple of pic-showing him giving one of the kids a good fashioned leathering would attract more attention. Certainly it would put the candidate closer to us homespun folk.

Camp Bull, located one mile north of Chi-defeat of General Proctor at the Battle of

Here Are Stars of "G.W.T.W." To Be Shown at Palace Starting Saturday

Clark Gable and Vivien Leigh, as Rhett Butler and Scarlett O'Hara, are shown in a scene from "Gone With the Wind," booked for one week at the Palace theater, starting Saturday.

Columns of interesting facts could be written about Margaret Mitchell's all-time best-seller, "Gone with the Wind," which will be brought to the Palace theater Saturday for a week.

This vast Technicolor production, requiring three hours and 47 minutes to show, will be screened daily at 2 and 8 p. m., and on Thursday and Friday mornings at 10. All seats will be reserved except for the two morning shows.

Plenty of good seats still remain for all matinee and night performances. Manager George E. Planck announced today.

Movie Rights Cost $50,000
David O. Selznick bought the motion picture rights to "Gone with the Wind" on July 30, 1936, for $50,000, the highest price ever paid for a first novel. The 1,037-page book had surpassed 50,000 copies on the first day of sale, shattering all existing fiction records. It has now been translated into 16 foreign languages and has sold around 2,000,000 copies.

Among established stars mentioned for the role of Scarlett were Bette Davis, Katharine Hepburn, Margaret Sullavan, Miriam Hopkins, Norma Shearer, Carole Lombard and Paulette Goddard. Records show that 1,400 candidates for the role were interviewed. In testing 80 of the candidates 149,000 feet of black and white film and 13,000 feet of Technicolor were used.

The burning of military supplies of Atlanta, one of the major spectacular scenes in the picture, was filmed in the night of Dec. 15, 1938, at which time Selznick met Miss Leigh, a spectator who had accompanied his brother Myron to the studio. A test was suggested and on Jan. 16, 1939 she was assigned to the role.

Three Style Changes
More than 3,000 sketches were made, visualizing in full color all the principal scenes in the picture. More than 5,500 separate items of wardrobe were required to be designed. During the 11 years covered by the story women's styles changed three times and the costume designer had to re-create not only the fashions of the hoopskirt before the Civil war but the makeshift models of the poverty-stricken war years and the bustle models of the "reconstruction" period.

Approximately 449,512 feet of film were shot, of which 160,000 were printed. From this length, most of it repulsive, the finally edited film has been cut to 20,300 feet. The recreated "City of Atlanta" is the largest set ever built. The reconstructed Peachtree street alone is 3,000 feet long. It is roughly estimated that a million feet of lumber went into building the set.

In addition to the 39 members of the cast there were over 12,000 employment days given to more than 2,400 extra and bit players. Seven Technicolor cameras were used to film the fire of Atlanta.

Your Income Tax

DEDUCTION FOR TAXES
Taxes on real estate and personal property paid during the year 1939 are deductible. So-called taxes which are assessed against local benefits, such as streets, sidewalks, drainage, and other like improvements, are not deductible but are to be capitalized, as they tend to increase the value of the property and thus constitute cost of a permanent improvement. The Federal income tax may not be deducted. The tax on unjust enrichment—a Federal tax on income—is not deductible. Income tax, however, paid to the State by an individual on his income is an allowable deduction in his Federal income tax return.

Customs duties paid by a person on articles imported for his own use are deductible. Import or tariff duties paid to customs officers, and business, license, privilege, excise, and stamp taxes paid to internal revenue collectors are deductible as taxes, provided they are not added to and made a part of the expenses of the business or the cost of the articles of merchandise with respect to which they are paid. In cases where they cannot be deducted separately as a tax, the Federal tax of 1 cent for each 10 cents or fraction thereof paid for admission to any place (where the amount paid is 41 cents or more) is deductible, provided an account has been kept by the taxpayer of the amount paid. Taxes on club dues are deductible by the member paying them. An individual may deduct the tax on his telephone conversations, radio messages, telegrams, and cables, and on the rent of his safety deposit box.

Unemployment compensation contributions required under a State law, if officially classified as taxes, are deductible as taxes and not as business expenses.

The excise taxes imposed upon employers by the Social Security Act, as amended are deductible, but the income tax imposed on employees by that act is not deductible. If an employer pays such tax for the employees, the amount may be deducted by the employer as a business expense, and the employees are required to report as additional income in their Federal income tax returns the amounts of the tax so paid for them.

Licenses fees exacted by a State or city upon certain businesses are deductible as taxes. Automobile license fees are ordinarily taxes and deductible. Postage is not a tax and is not deductible. In general, taxes are deductible only by the person upon whom they are imposed.

Federal estate and gift taxes and State inheritance, estate, legacy, or succession taxes are not deductible on Federal income-tax returns. The Federal taxes on automobiles, gasoline, cigarettes, and liquor are imposed upon the manufacturer, producer, or importer and are not deductible by the purchaser or consumer. Whether or not the gasoline tax, the use tax, or the sales tax levied by a State may be deducted by the individual purchaser depends upon the terms of the State law imposing the tax, consequently, the right to the deduction, as between purchaser and seller, varies in the different States.

Mr. Farmer!

Do not be misled by the statements of our large competitors with regard to their enormous purchases from the farmer or with regard to the great benefits they are to the farmer. Those who sell cheap must buy cheap therefore they have done more to hurt the farmer than to help him. Union Bakery is the only one in our country who has done more to help the farmer than to hurt him.

The Clemens biography is scheduled for publication in the fall. No date has been set for the biography by Harris.

The incident referred to is an exchange of correspondence which took place between Laddie Boy, whose famous master took time out from White House duties to write a humorous epistle, and Rex, an English bull. The latter dog performed with the Shrine circus in 1922 and its ghost writer was Mr. Whitehead, at that time press agent for the Shrine.

Rex wrote and invited Laddie Boy to come to Columbus for the circus. The circus dog promised to have a box for his distinguished visitor, Rex, and in return received a photo of Laddie Boy, signed by Laddie's ghost writer, the President.

"Laddie Boy's" Answer

In the reply, written for Laddie Boy, the president wrote, "I have wagged a stubby tail in canine delirium over the joy your invitation gave me."

Laddie continued "his" letter with the information that he was born "back in Ohio" and "a dog has pleasant recollections of the scene of his origin."

Laddie Boy was born at the Lingo kennels widely known Air-dale center at LaRue.

Noted Ohio Churchman at Another Important Milestone in Long Career

BISHOP SCHREMS

By The Associated Press
CLEVELAND, O., Feb. 22.—Archbishop Joseph Schrembs, bishop of the Catholic diocese of Cleveland, reached another illustrious milestone today in his half-century career as priest and prelate.

Members of the hierarchy, civil officials, the diocesan clergy, humble nuns and the laity crowded St. John cathedral to honor the archbishop on an occasion of double significance.

Twenty-nine years ago today the Bataavia-born prelate, now approaching 74 years of age, was consecrated a bishop at Grand Rapids, Mich.

In solemn observance he chose this date for formal imposition of the sacred pallium bestowed upon him last December by Pope Pius XII.

Emblem of Rank
The pallium, emblem of archiepiscopal rank, is a circular band worn about the neck, with a pendant in front and another behind. The two-inch band is made of white wool from two lambs presented annually on the feast of St. Agnes to the Pope by canons of the basilica of St. John Lateran, cathedral church of the pontiff. The pendants are weighted with lead covered with black silk.

Ornamented by six black crosses on which are gem-studded pins, the pallium is one of Rome's highest tributes. It is reserved for the Pope, and by papal permission, archbishops.

Archbishop John T. McNicholas of Cincinnati, whose white "cappa magna" (great cape) denotes the Dominican order, was chosen to place the pallium on Archbishop Schrembs' shoulders. Archbishop Schrembs was celebrant of the solemn pontifical mass.

In attendance were Archbishop Edward Mooney of Detroit, and nine bishops.

Colorful Pageantry

The pageantry included a procession from the cathedral rectory to the church in which marched uniformed Knights of St. John, plumed Knights of St. John, Knights of Columbus in formal attire and colorfully attired priests, monsignors and prelates.

Archbishop Schrembs, spiritual leader of some 700,000 Catholics in 14 northeastern Ohio counties, was elevated to his present rank in March, 1939, in the first major promotion in America by Pope Pius XII.

CHAPTER THIRTY-THREE The Man In The Garage

I COULDN'T hear what the Sergeant said on the telephone, and while he was talking I poured the coffee. I slipped it gratefully. It was warm and comfortable in the shop and I felt drowsy. Mr. Kimball took a cup of coffee from Ishi and bent over to talk to Direk. "I don't believe that Whitefield knew Joan at all well," he said in a low voice. "He can't be the man." Direk rubbed his forehead wearily. "It's hard to tell," he said. "The most amazing things crop up, things you wouldn't believe." His voice made me feel shivery. Mr. Kimball and I both eyed him curiously, but neither of us said anything and the Sergeant completed his call then. He drank a cup of coffee hastily and left the shop. Tim Lathrop came over to us and took the Sergeant's chair. "It's terrible," he said. "I can't believe it yet. Have you any idea what could have happened to Richard to make him do such a thing?" He looked at Direk, his face miserable. Direk shook his head. "I've been nearly frantic," Tim

Lathrop went on. "The time since Monday evening has been like a bad dream." Mr. Kimball bent forward. "How is your wife, Tim?" "A little better," he hesitated. "The Sergeant talked with her this afternoon for a few minutes." We were silent for a long moment, each one of us wondering what the Sergeant heard from Louise Lathrop. "Then Direk rose. 'We'd better get some dinner, Chris.'"

"Wrong again," he laughed. "Our friend, the Sergeant, has a man stationed in the hall to guard you, darling." And he left without telling me where he was going. So I decided to spend a quiet night, sitting up in my chair with all the lights on, and the poker from the fireplace in one hand and the carving knife in the other. As long as I was with Direk I felt very confident, but as soon as I was alone, the dimly lighted house and the oppressive quiet that weighed it didn't make me feel any too cheerful. The red-haired Mr. Norton was stationed in the lower hall and saluted me with a bow and smile as I went upstairs. I saw with relief that from his chair he had a fine view of the door of my apartment. Nevertheless, I decided to lock myself in. Of course, there were keys at large, but one has to have faith in something. Then I fastened the windows securely and turned on every light in the whole apartment.

In a few minutes Patrick came up with a basket of wood. He looked very queer when I unlocked the door to let him in, but he built a fire and left without saying anything. The Noise One evening can't go on forever, thank goodness. I roamed around the apartment, tried all of the chairs, and finally curled up by the fireplace to read. The house was very quiet, everyone seemed to be out, and I don't know when I first noticed the noise. It was a muffled, monotonous sound and it might have been going on for some time, since it wasn't particularly noticeable. Finally I sat up, realizing that whatever it was I'd been hearing it for quite a while. It seemed to be coming from the yard. I went to the window and drew the curtain, but the garden was dark and I couldn't see beyond the path by the house. There was nothing there, but the noise continued, a steady hum. So I went to the door and unlocked it, expecting to call Norton from the lower hall. As I walked to the stairway a telephone somewhere on the third floor rung shrilly. It seemed to come from an open doorway, because it was so loud. Norton rushed upstairs past me and on up to the third floor with Mr. Kimball following him wearily. The telephone was ringing in Whitefield's apartment and a queer feeling.

When they came back I stopped Mr. Kimball and told him about the noise I had been hearing. He came in my apartment and opened the window to listen.

POOL SUPERVISOR

As French minister of armaments, Raoul Dautry (above) supervises France's end of arrangements with Britain pooling two nation's manufacturing resources.

Then he called Norton and the three of us stood there with our heads out of the window trying to figure out what it was.

"It's a motor running somewhere," Norton said suddenly, pulling his head in. "What's in the rear of the yard—the garage?"

Mr. Kimball nodded. "You'd better come with me," he said in a queer voice. "There's a car out there with the engine running."

Mr. Kimball raised his tired eyes to me. "How long have you been hearing it, Miss Howarth?" I shook my head. "It may have been ten minutes or half an hour, I don't know."

For a moment the two men stared at each other.

"Quick!" Norton said, and they were out of the room and down the stairs before I realized it.

From the window I could see them as they crossed the path, but in the darkness I couldn't see the garage. I stood there about five minutes, I guess, and still they didn't come back. So, slipping on my coat, I ran downstairs. Ishi was just leaving the shop and I begged him to find out what was the matter.

He seemed to be gone hours, and finally the shop door opened and for once he wasn't smiling. He just stared at me.

"Ishi, what is it?" I gasped. "Miss Howarth," he said, swallowing with great difficulty. "In the garage—there is a man—I believe he is dead."

Unintelligible

My throat was dry. I couldn't say a word. I sat down in a chair and thought wildly that at the rate it kept on, in another day all of us would be dead.

Ishi stood before me, showing no emotion except that his eyes were bright and fearful. He was muttering something that I couldn't understand.

I tried to be calm. "Who is the man?"

"I did not stay to see," he said stiffly. "It is a man. That is all that I know. The detective told me to get the hell out," he added gravely. Then he looked at me, a bland, inscrutable look. "I presume you already know everything concerning it," he said, and walked through the shop to one of the rooms in the back of the house.

I stared after him stupidly. I felt as though I were dreaming. Ishi had said, "I presume you already know everything concerning it."

Concerning what? The dead man in the garage? I rubbed my forehead. It was unintelligible.

Then Norton burst into the shop and made for the telephone. And once again Sergeant Long was summoned to 19 George street.

I crept out of the chair. "There will be another of those awful investigations," I thought.

If the Sergeant wanted me he could call. I wasn't going to be around waiting for him. So I walked unsteadily towards the doorway. Norton, who had just finished telephoning, called after me. "Do you know where Mr. Kolt is?"

My heart stopped. I tried to turn around. Could it be Direk in the garage?

He'd left me without a word as to where he was going and he hadn't taken the car. Was it still outside of the house?

I shook my head. "Is it... is it..." But before I could gasp out my question Norton had slammed the outside door of the shop and was on his way back to the garage. I wanted to look out of the window for Direk's car, but there were policemen on the sidewalk, so I went upstairs and knocked on the door of the front apartment.

I must have been pale because Adrienne Wells, when she opened the door, looked at me queerly. "Is there anything the matter?" she asked.

I tried to explain. And then I went to the window. Direk's yellow roadster was still in front of the house. And my mind became perfectly clear again. With his car there it seemed unlikely that he'd have gone into the garage.

Adrienne Wells offered me a cigarette and I accepted it. When she lit the match I was shocked at the change in her. She was gray and haggard from lack of sleep—or from worry. Her purple silk pajamas were very unbecoming. I kept wondering for no reason at all why she wore such a trying color.

"Where is Mary Ann?" I asked. And the girl told me she was spending the night with the Fifty-seventh Street aunt.

"If you're lonely," I suggested, "why don't you come to my apartment? I'd be glad to have you."

She shook her head. "No, thanks. I'm not lonely, or afraid." And I believed her. There was obviously something on her mind, but it wasn't fear.

that the division will do better from now on in safety. Supt. Baker also reviewed the safety record here and declared he is not interested in safety records as such, but solely in reducing the number of casualties. He said that last year in the transportation department alone there were 15 major personal injuries, "too many." On the other side of the picture, he told how the freight handlers at Akron went through 1939 without a reportable injury, because the idea of safety had been sold to the men.

"Think it, talk it, act on it," he said. "Never mind about the record. Just try to prevent injuries."

Urges Cooperation

Mr. Felker stressed the importance of cooperation of all in bringing about safety in industry and compared the situation today with that of not long ago. When he started to work in industry years ago in Pennsylvania, workers were looked upon as "concerns" if they displayed common sense caution about hazards, such as getting out from under overhead cranes when they came by. Now such an act is recognized as the sign of a good workman.

"Safety can never get any further than the interest actively shown by top management on down to the workers themselves," he declared, adding that today top management is concerned about safety.

He quoted from the 1939 Ohio accident record, which showed among other things that 102,400 claims for injury and occupational diseases were filed and 996 workers were killed.

Although this record is bad enough, 25 years ago it was two, three or four times as large, Mr. Felker said.

The duties of various industrial employees in regard to safety were outlined, starting with the safety engineer whose first job is not to work wonders "but to formulate a safety program and see that it is executed."

He must also investigate all accidents, discover the cause and correct it if he can. He must sponsor safety contests and promote safety meetings and lastly must carry on a safety education campaign.

Responsibility Placed

Much of the responsibility falls on the foreman, supervisor or stray boss, he declared. They must instruct all new men in the hazards of the work and all old men assigned to new jobs. He urged that this be done thoroughly and religiously and not as in the old days, by giving a man his tools, pointing to the job and saying, "go to it."

The men in charge of workers should always set a good example in safety for their subordinates. Mr. Felker quoted figures which showed that of 173 accidents, only 10 per cent were caused by lack of machinery guards, two per cent were due to personnel or supervisory faults.

"We must reappraise the matter of safety," he said, commenting that in the past industry has been concentrating on safeguarding machines instead of on the men. The psychology of learning, applied to industrial work, was discussed in detail to show how unsafe practices are born and become rooted in workers.

Mr. Felker listed the three basic laws of learning:

Readiness—The worker must be ready and willing to learn, in the proper frame of mind.

Repetition—The thing to be learned must be repeated over and over and over again, before it is really learned.

Satisfaction—The thing to be learned by the worker must give him pleasure or satisfaction when he does it.

An example of this last point is the old practice of teachers making children write out correct sentences 100 times or so. Mr. Felker said generally this doesn't work, because the child does not enjoy doing it.

But the laws of learning apply to good as well as bad habits, he said. A worker can start a bad work habit the first day in the shop and if it gives him satisfaction or does the job, he will do it again and again until it becomes habitual.

150 ATTEND CHURCH FELLOWSHIP DINNER

Central Christian Meeting Links Services with Easter.

Approximately 150 members of the congregation of Central Christian church attended a fellowship dinner in the church parlors last night. The dinner was planned to link the recent union evangelistic services with the church's plans for Easter.

Cutler A. McGrew, chairman of the church board, presided as toastmaster and gave a brief talk praising the congregation for progress made. Harold Patrick led group singing and Diana Rose Sakel played several accordion selections.

Speaking on "Why Doesn't Andrew Bring Peter?" Dr. Harry L. Bell, pastor, said that the story of Andrew's finding Jesus and seeking out his brother Simon and bringing him to the Master is not being retold in a strong way today.

"The modern Andrew," he said, doesn't bring Simon because it doesn't seem to be greatly worth while, and Andrew does not realize the good to his own soul in calling Simon. Also, Simon is not told because it is not considered proper to tell him. Why should we talk about the rain drops and the sunshine that God sends and yet hesitate to talk about God the Giver?"

The dinner was served by the ladies of the adult Sunday school classes.

OPPOSES HYDRO PLANTS

By The Associated Press

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Feb. 22.—Proposed hydro-electric power developments on the Ohio river at Gallipolis, O., Letral, W. Va., and Greenup, Ky., would force 500 coal miners out of work and mean a loss to the industry of about 500,000 tons a year, in the opinion of Van A. Biltner, president of United Mine Workers district 17.

Biltner expressed his protest in a letter to Col. E. H. Marks, of the U. S. engineers at Cincinnati, and said the statement would be put in the record at a public hearing in Portsmouth, O., next Tuesday.

The Gallipolis locks and dam on the Ohio (at Hogssett, W. Va.) are completed. The dam at Letral and at Greenup have been proposed.

Henderson said Baker was sentenced to one to seven years in Mansfield reformatory in 1934 for breaking and entering. He was paroled, declared a parole violator, and entered Ohio penitentiary May 1, 1939. Another parole was granted July 15, 1939, and he was charged with a second violation last Dec. 15.

Making Delicious Pies on Program of Cooking School

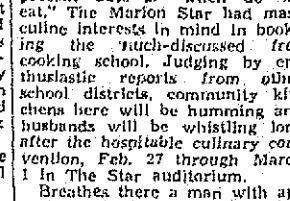

Menus make the headlines these days.

The subject of food always captures the spotlight of attention, whether the occasion is an afternoon bridge, a coast-to-coast plane flight, a trip to the World's Fair, or the visit of England's King and Queen at the White House.

"What did they eat?" That was the absorbing topic before the event and long after. No wonder the anxious hostesses and guests and a very awake night, hoping for a brand-new inspiration.

Knowing that the favorite question from primitive man to the present date is "when do we eat," The Marion Star had masculine interests in mind in booking the much-discussed free cooking school. Judging by enthusiastic reports from other school districts, community kitchens here will be humming and husbands will be whistling long after the hospitable culinary convention, Feb. 27 through March 1 in The Star auditorium.

Breathes there a man with appetite so dead, who never to himself has muttered "Why doesn't he bake a pie any more?" Gentlemen who prefer pie will rise and cheer at the glad tidings that Mrs. V. Elmer Smith will give simple, motion-by-motion instructions for flaky pastry and good-to-the-last-bite pies. Furthermore, this national home economics authority maintains that pie is an easy dessert, and that it is digestible when it is made the right way with the right ingredients.

prisoner, most of the time in the Salamanca provincial hospital, where he was said to have been given privileges and a considerable degree of freedom. Meanwhile the American state department kept hammering for his release.

Mrs. Dahl returned to the United States alone last November and only last Jan. 11 won a new promise of help from the state department in Washington. At that time Dahl was reported to be in fairly good health despite his long confinement.

Due to Seattle today and also scheduled to sail on the Exirra was Randolph Opata, born in Cleveland, whose mother, Mrs. Frances Valente, lives in Cleveland.

FRED MAN'S MOTHER

HAPPY IN CLEVELAND

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, Feb. 22.—Release of Rudolph Opata, one of the last eight American citizens held as Spanish civil war prisoners, today made his mother "so happy and upset she can't speak anything."

She said the 23-year-old Cleveland's brother, Joseph Opata, "We had thought something happened to him because we hadn't heard from him for almost a year and a half. Then, last October, we had a letter from the Spanish government, with only his signature on it," the brother said.

MRS. DAHL DOUBTS

NEWS OF RELEASE

By The Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 22.—Edith Rogers Dahl, shapely blond wife of Harold E. Dahl, received with skepticism today the news that her fiercer husband had won release from Spain as a civil war prisoner.

Pausing in a rehearsal of a Spanish dance routine at a local theater, Dahl's 35-year-old wife told newsmen:

"I would be very, very happy if it were true—but I have heard it so many times before that I'll not believe it until I receive confirmation from Washington."

"She stopped the firing squad," proclaims her billing at Fays theater here.

ROOSEVELT OBSERVES

WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY

By The Associated Press

ABOARD THE U. S. S. LANG AT SEA, Feb. 22.—President Roosevelt is observing the birthday of the nation's first president today by attending football and boxing contests aboard the U. S. S. Tusconosa.

His role as spectator follows two fishing sessions near a Costa Rican island yesterday. Brig. Gen. Edwin M. Watson, secretary to the President, reported the fishing was "fair" but otherwise there was no news. George Fox, a White House pharmacist, landed the largest prize, a 45-pound wahoo, a blue food fish.

Last night the presidential party attended movies aboard the cruiser.

GOVERNMENT STRIKES

SAND, GRAVEL COMBINE

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 22.—The government struck a blow at control of sand and gravel prices in Ohio, West Virginia and Pennsylvania today with a court order "perpetually" restraining four sand and gravel companies, nine of their officers and a gravel producing association from practices said to have led to control.

The complaint charged the defendants, by concerted action, had the power to raise and fix the wholesale and retail market prices of sand and gravel.

SENATE DEMOCRATS SEE TRADE VICTORY

Administration Poll Indicates Pacts Will Win.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—An administration poll was said authoritatively today to have indicated that the senate would approve continuation of the reciprocal trade program by a close margin.

The poll, conducted quietly by Senators Barkley, Democrat of Kentucky, Harrison, Democrat of Mississippi, and Byrnes, Democrat of South Carolina, was described in administration quarters as disclosing that if all 98 senators answered the roll call, 49 would oppose an amendment to require senate ratification of the trade agreements, 41 would favor it, and the votes of 6 would be in doubt.

Since the opposition is expected to reach its maximum strength on the ratification amendment, supporters said they were confident of final approval of the program. The administration strategists did not count on any senate Republicans to vote for the program.

The house will vote tomorrow on legislation, sidetracking business today, for observance of George Washington's birthday anniversary.

House Democratic leaders predicted that not more than 25 Democrats would vote against the extension bill. They pointed to a speech in New York last night by Rep. Barton, Republican of New York, in support of the program as an indication that Republican opposition would not be solid.

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER JR.

GIVES $100,000 TO FINNS

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—John D. Rockefeller Jr., is the donor of $100,000 to the Finnish relief fund, the largest individual contribution to Finnish relief.

Accompanying the check was this note signed by the financier: "The gallant stand which Finland has made for life and liberty has thrilled the world and set up for humanity new high standards of courage and sacrifice. As a tribute to this brave people, my family and I desire to contribute $100,000 to the Finnish relief fund for the desperately needed service it is 'Finland'."

The gift was announced by Herbert Hoover, the fund's national chairman, who said that collections had passed the $2,000,000 mark and that $1,200,000 had been sent to Finland for civilian relief work.

WPA FRAUD CHARGED

IN TWO INDICTMENTS

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, Feb. 22.—Atlas Engineering, Inc., and the Youngstown Construction Co.'s president, Victor Shulrump, are charged with making false reports to WPA.

A federal grand jury late yesterday named them on seven counts. They were accused of falsification of statements and records in monthly reports on labor and material bills paid in connection with a school building addition in New Lyme township, Ash-tubula county.

The jury also indicted Fred A. Simons, superintendent of a Mahoning county WPA project, on charges of diverting $35 in government money by billing WPA for more hours than he worked.

PLAN OF STAMP SALES

PROTESTED BY BROWN

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—Rep. Clarence J. Brown (R-Ohio) protested a postoffice department policy restricting the first day of sale of new stamps of a single city "in deference to the wishes of stamp collectors."

Brown had requested that special stamps honoring Horace Mann, noted educator, be placed on sale at Yellow Springs, Ohio, on March 14, the same date as their official release at Boston. Mann founded Antioch college at Yellow Springs.

The Ohioan asked the department to reconsider because he believed the stamps should be placed on sale at Yellow Springs regardless of the wishes or convenience of stamp collectors.

SHERMAN'S BIRTHPLACE

IN LANCASTER DOOMED

By The Associated Press

LANCASTER, O., Feb. 22.—The birthplace of Civil War General William Tecumseh Sherman, one of Lancaster's most prized historical possessions, was slated today to give way to a modern apartment building.

Owner Ed Schlicher said his decision followed failure of state and national legislatures to purchase the building and land for creation of a shrine to the colorful warrior. An attempt to sell the site privately also failed. Patriotic societies estimated $15,000 would be required for purchase and remodeling.

SPURNED SUITOR CHAINS SELF NEAR GIRL'S HOME

Prefers Death To Life Without Her.

By The Associated Press

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 22.—A spurned suitor, transferred from self-padded shackles to jail, told officers permanent imprisonment—even death—was preferable to life without the woman he has loved 12 years.

Police found Melvin P. Miller last night living in a tent near the woman's home in protest of her coolness. His neck was chained to a tree and secured by padlocks whose keyholes he had filled with cement.

The 30-year-old scissors grinder said it took six years to get enough courage to ask the pretty stenographer for a date. The next six he spent in a futile effort to obtain another.

Booked for investigation, Miller said, "without her—imprisonment, life, or death, is preferable."

Said the object of his affections: "The whole situation is too ridiculous."

M'KENZIE

is divided and inflamed over the question of whether the country should abandon its neutrality and go to the aid of the Finns. Pressure from the people for a change of government policy has been very heavy, and may easily increase as the result of the Pajala affair.
In the long run this may be the thing which will draw Sweden and Norway into the Russo-Finnish war as partners with the Anglo-French allies. It is difficult to see how they can avoid taking a hand in this conflict sooner or later.
Both Sweden and Norway have made it clear that they regard their security as menaced by Communist Russia. Their whole inclination is to rush to the aid of their neighbor and sweep the Red flood back behind its own banks once more.

Fear Nazi Threats

The reason they haven't done this is because of Nazi threats to take action against them if they abandon neutrality. Sweden and Norway have felt compelled to refuse allies permission to send organized military forces across the country to the rescue of the Finns. But if Finland loses ultimately because of lack of aid, Sweden and Norway will have to fight Russia anyway, if their fears of Soviet ambitions are well founded.
Therefore the Scandinavian countries would seem to be up against the unhappy position of having to decide whether it would be more advantageous all round to get into the fight now, or whether it is better to delay. That's precisely the problem which is agitating the Swedish public at this moment.
Should Norway and Sweden join Finland in war against Russia, this would not automatically make them allies of England and France, unless the Anglo-French pair also declared war on Russia. The first move Germany made against the Scandinavian states, however, would immediately bring them into alliance with the Anglo-French contingent.

MARKER ADDS NAME TO LIST

Seven Democrats Now in Race for Governor with More Likely.

Special to The Star
COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 22.—The number of Democrats who feel capable of restoring their party to the governor's office mounted to seven today and there was no indication where the list might end.

The latest addition to the slate of announced candidates was James R. Marker, Columbus engineer and former state highway director.
Marker opened his campaign before his boyhood friends at Versailles last night. His candidacy was endorsed immediately by editors of Democratic newspapers in the Fourth congressional district comprising Allen, Auglaize, Darke, Mercer, Miami and Shelby counties.

A former Ohio State university football player, Marker said he would "carry the ball for good government and the ideals of Franklin D. Roosevelt."
Others who have announced their candidacies for the Democratic nomination in the May 14 primary are former Secretary of State William J. Kennedy of Cleveland, former Attorney General Herbert S. Duffy of Columbus, former Representative William L. Harbo of Cleveland, former Representative James F. Flynn of Sandusky, former Erie county prosecutor, Frank A. Dye, Columbus attorney and former high school principal, and Lawrence T. Baker of Columbus, plumber's helper on the WPA.

Former Gov. George White declared he might be a candidate if former Gov. Davey declined to seek a third term. Davey's friends indicated he might not announce his decision until after the special congressional elections in the seventeenth and twenty-second districts next Tuesday.

Marker, in his address, criticized Gov. Bricker for "false economy" and failure to call a special session of the legislature to liberalize old age pensions. Charging that bootlegging was flourishing, he proposed taking the state out of the retail liquor business without jeopardizing state monopoly.
Democratic headquarters announced that Davey, former Lieut. Gov. William G. Pickrel, State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson and National Committeewoman Mrs. Mildred Jaster would campaign in the seventeenth district in behalf of Byron B. Ashbrook, Democratic candidate to succeed his late uncle, Rep. William A. Ashbrook.

Addresses were scheduled in Coshocton and Newark Friday evening, and Delaware and Mt. Vernon Monday evening.
Ashbrook's Republican opponent is J. Harry McGregor, majority leader in the Ohio house of representatives.

"Adam's" Arrival in U. S. Expected To Cause Furor

By The Associated Press
NEW YORK, Feb. 22—Jacob "Adam" is on his way to the United States from London, where his thumping big gorilla figure in public and his recent hairless gorilla chest of alabaster, from coast to coast.

And that may and probably will spell trouble in New York and Washington, D. C., in Buffalo, Rochester, Detroit, Chicago, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Miami and finally at the New York World's Fair, for this Adam stirs up minor riots among critics, sculptors and laymen wherever he goes.
He is seven feet tall and Epstein, the 60-year-old American-born Jew of Russian Polish blood who created him, calls it his "greatest work," a description which may be taken to be synonymous with his "most controversial work" since Epstein's statues have always roused anger as well as praise.
The statue is traveling on an unnamed British ship, due to dock in New York this week, according to Freedman and Slater, importers and exporters, who will care for it until two Londoners arrive to make final arrangements for the transcontinental tour.
A special guard has "Adam" in hand and he is insured for $85,000. He has thick legs, a tilted head, and is so frankly and uncompromisingly anatomically realistic in his nudeness that he shocked many, many Brits.
The London Daily Telegraph called it "a simian rendering of the human form, the boldest experiment in neo-barbarism that its creator has yet attempted."
Epstein called it "an epitome of man's appetite and aspirations." Art or monstrosity? Well, an old London woman looked at it and dropped her market basket.

SACRIFICES CHILD

Member of a voodoo cult that allegedly believes in human sacrifice, Mrs. Betty Hardaker, 26, of Palm Springs, Calif., has confessed killing her five-year-old daughter because the child "was too good to live." The mother told police she planned to "end it all" but that she didn't know how to do it. The child was dropped on its head.

BELIEVE NEW DEAL WON'T PUSH PURGE

President Likely To Let Foes Run in Peace.

By The Associated Press
WASHINGTON, Feb. 22—Several Democratic senators expressed the belief today that President Roosevelt would refrain from any general effort to defeat anti-administration congressmen.
A hands-off attitude would contrast with his 1938 stand, when he tried to block renomination of three anti-New Deal senators and one house member. The President failed in three of the four attempts.
Politicians argued that White House participation in any primary congressional contests this spring might injure Mr. Roosevelt's chances of controlling the Democratic presidential nomination if he declines to run himself.
Senator Holt (D-W. Va.), an administration critic, said he would not be surprised at a New Deal move against his own candidacy for renomination, but he felt that there would be no "general drive" of 1938 proportions.
"The whole plan of the administration is to run Roosevelt for a third term or the candidate he desires," Holt said. "A purge move would injure that plan decidedly."
Holt said he had talked with several "possible 1940 purges" and found none who thought the administration was going to "gun" for him.
There is no likelihood of administration opposition to Senators Wheeler (D-Mont.) and O'Mahoney (D-Wyo.) for their part in the court reorganization fight, Holt said, adding that they had "made up" with the President.
Senator Burke (D-Neb.), a critic

of administration labor policies, will have opposition in the April 9 primary from Gov. Roy Cochran. But Burke said today: "There is nothing to indicate a purge as far as my state is concerned. There has not been the slightest intimation that anyone in official circles in Washington is placing any obstacles in my way."

CINCINNATI DINNER HONORS INVENTORS

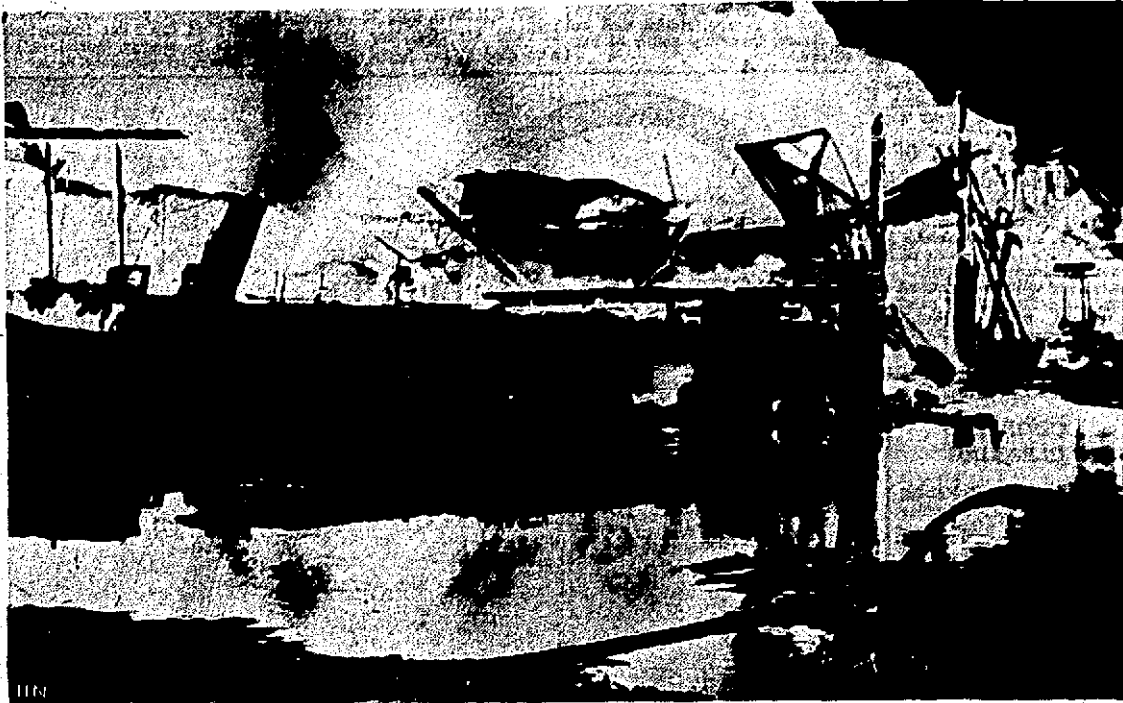

Sixteen Ohioans Among 28 Awarded Plaques.

By The Associated Press
CINCINNATI, Feb. 22—American industry observed 150 years of the nation's patent laws last night by awarding 28 inventors and research workers "Modern Pioneer" plaques.
Headed by Orville Wright, co-inventor of the airplane, the list of recipients included 16 Ohioans whose contributions were recognized by the National Association of Manufacturers, the Ohio Manufacturers' association, and the Cincinnati Industrial association. Howard Cooley of New York, chairman of the N. A. M., told the inventors at a dinner that no other country had offered them the incentive and opportunity available in the United States.
Wright did not attend the dinner. Other Ohioans honored included:
George Clausing of Portsmouth, holder of patents for women's heels and shoe machinery.
Thomas Willett Rolph of Newark, holder of 36 patents in lighting and lighting improvement.
John B. Titus of Middletown, credited with designing the first steel strip mill.
"A device that can be held in one hand has been invented to enable a person seated in an audience to control the volume of sound emanating from amplifiers in theaters and outdoor auditoriums."

IMPORTANCE OF FARM INCOME IS STRESSED

Speaker Points Out How Low Earnings Affect Business.

Special to The Star

KENTON, O., Feb. 22 — L. A. Zimmer of Findlay, district supervisor for the farm security administration, today left with Kenton farm and business leaders a message declaring the need of a program to raise 27 per cent of Hardin county farmers from the income bracket of those earning less than $1,000 annually.

Mr. Zimmer said that 670 farm families in the county had an average gross income of $650 last year—with an actual cash income of between $300 and $400. He pointed out that the problem of these 3,000 people, who buy only the cheapest possible articles in the least possible amount, should be a major problem for business people of the community to solve in the interest of better business and a finer community life.

"Of the 670 families, 82 had gross incomes of less than $250 ... my guess is that every one of them were on relief. Another 195 families had gross incomes of between $400 and $600. Certainly they only purchased the bare necessities of life. The remaining 392 families whose incomes fell between $600 and $1,000 were of little value to the community from the standpoint of their purchasing power," Mr. Zimmer asserted.

In addition to purchasing power, the speaker told his listeners that another problem—that of soil conservation—entered into the picture. Most of the families are tenant farm groups, with no responsibility toward keeping up soil fertility and therefore sound soil practices are not engaged in. The situation of these people has a direct and important bearing on the situation of every one of us, including our businesses, our schools, our taxes, our community life and our society as a whole.

Her program here tomorrow night will include Spanish and German songs and Negro music.

VERNON HEIGHTS SCHOOL HEARS TALK ON ROTARY

Richard Cleary, school president, presided over the program. Robert Oberon was in charge of devotions.

"The Late Christopher Bean," to be presented by the junior class of Harding High school next week, was given by Ralph Howard, a member of the Y. M. C. club, high school dramatics club.

MARYSVILLE, Feb. 22—The board of Union county commissioners today approved a resolution requesting the county engineer to send to the state WPA headquarters a plan for the construction of the Newland road in Liberty and York townships at an estimated cost of $81,572.00 with Union county furnishing $22,104.00 and WPA a total of $39,468.00. The road is about four and one-half miles long.

The work as set up by the engineer, would give work to about 130 men for a period of six months and is expected to get underway about the first of April if approved by the WPA. The road will be water bound macadam.

So many people take it — to increase appetite — to boost energy

COUNTLESS thousands of men and women can testify to the benefits S.S.S. Tonic has brought them.

The facts are simple because of all conditions affecting the human body a low blood count is most decisive. If you feel rundown... lack a keen appetite... have lost weight... can't give up until you restore those precious red-blood-cells back to normal.

S.S.S. Tonic may be just what you need to get you on the right road to health and happiness again. In S.S.S. Tonic you get after the trouble in two ways... first you increase the appetite and better your stomach digestion... this making better use of the food you eat... secondly, this, weak, watery blood is made rich and red again thus giving you a boost in energy.

Conservation Leaders Declare State Must See Danger of Water Shortage

This, the last of three articles on the Ohio water situation, recommends conservationists' suggestions for replenishing the Ohio water supply which they say is disappearing at an alarming rate.

By GORDON C. NIXON
Associated Press Writer

COLUMBUS, Feb. 21. — Ohio will have abundant water for all its needs in future years only if it "wakes up" and does something to conserve a rapidly vanishing supply, two conservationists cautioned today.

Otherwise, they said, cities, industries and agriculture will find it increasingly difficult to secure enough water. State Geologist Wilbur Stout, reporting the water table fallen almost 100 feet in some sections, advocated: (1) installation of small dams in all streams to retard rainfall run-off and let the water soak into the ground and (2) a system of reservoirs to trap flood water and divert it into immense gravel beds laid down by glaciers, which he said now were being pumped dry.

David C. Warner, executive secretary of the state water conservation board, concurred in these recommendations and added that contour farming to prevent erosion would have a great effect on conserving the water supply. Contour farming encourages drainage of fields for a minimum of erosion through filling around slopes instead of up and down them.

Works Without Pay

But Warner commented that "people won't wake up until the damage has been done." He has worked almost four years without pay.

Prof. C. E. Sherman of the Ohio State university civil engineering department said that Ohio cities would have to pipe water from Lake Erie if Stout's and Warner's predictions were correct. He pointed out that Los Angeles, Calif., piped water 240 miles after it pumped dry its underlying gravel beds.

State agriculture and conservation department heads both saw a need of replenishing the underground water supply. John T. Brown, agriculture director, termed the situation "serious" and endorsed a system of headwater dams and reservoirs ready under way by the conservation division.

Wants More Lakes

Don Waters, conservation commissioner, said, his aim was to have an acre of water for every 200 acres of land in the state to restore underground water as well as to improve fishing opportunities.

Reporting that two-thirds of the state's streams went dry last year, Waters said he was encouraging farmers to take advantage of a little-known law enabling them to reduce their tax valuations through pond building.

The law, written by Warner, assures a farmer a deduction of $40 a year for every acre of water provided that his dam or reservoir has approval of the state director of public works. The deduction is limited to 40 per cent of the farm's total valuation.

Walter F. Kirk, master of the state grange, although admittedly "not excited" over the danger of an early winter shortage except through drought conditions, said the next dry cycle might be worse and added that the grange for one time had advocated that farmers increase the humus in their soil to aid water retention. How would Stout and Warner trap flood water and send it into the ground to refill glacial gravel beds? By locating reservoirs in valleys which overlie the gravel and by sinking shafts down through hard strata to that backed-up water would sink and spread out through the gravel.

Cites Example

Stout said that water in Buckeye lake would disappear into the ground and seep as far as Circleville if the all mud-water-resistant strata underlying it were pierced. He did not advocate such a step, however, but used it as an illustration of the extent of gravel beds lying 100 to 300 feet beneath the surface.

The Willis Creek dam of the Muskingum watershed conservancy district, Stout said, would keep gravel beds full from Newark to Circleville if water were sent into the ground behind the dam.

Stout credited his plan to Leo Ranney, McConnelville engineer, and described a project this way: the reservoir would be located over a gravel deposit which was a river bed before the glaciers filled it; a 30-foot diameter shaft cut down to the gravel and 200-foot "fingers" run away from the shaft like the spokes of a wheel would be used to "pipe" the water into the gravel.

Flood waters backing up in the reservoirs would sink into the ground to bolster the water table, providing flood protection as well as water conservation, Stout said.

Frost Pattern Studied by Science

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Editor
ITHACA, N. Y.—Frost patterns on a window pane have opened a whole new field of scientific conjecture this winter at Cornell university.

Close-up photos, made by Professor Lester W. Sharp, of the botany department, show that the frost nearly always takes the form of some plant life. His pictures suggest that one of the unsolved mysteries of science, the unseen movement of living particles during growth, may be interpreted by watching frost crystals grow.

The photos were taken from inside, directly against the daylight, with a camera equipped with an extension bellows and a 7 1/2 inch objective. Slow lantern slide plates were exposed for a few seconds.

Points of Similarity

Plants which the pictures resemble include sea weeds under water, palms, fossil growths which have disappeared from the earth except in slabs of rock, ferns and heads of grain. The seaweed-like growths and the whiskered heads of grain commonly start at the lower edge or corner of a pane where the temperature is lowest. They tend gradually upward.

The ice crystals are lifeless. But physicists have shown that a crystal grows under guidance of electrical attractions that pick up neighboring atoms in continuous streams, much as living tissues are supposed to use chemical reactions. They have discovered even that some parts of living tissue are crystalline.

One puzzle in life is the spiraling of plants, animals and men. Tissues often build up in spirals, usually favoring one direction more than the other. To this unseen structure has been attributed the fact that a blind-folded man, animal or bird, walks, runs or flies in circles, which usually are spirals.

"Regimented Curves"

The frost patterns are only two-dimensional, so they cannot spiral. But the photos show masses of regimented curves which suggest that if the ice were free, it too would spiral as it grows. "Although there is much that we do not understand about the development of the various frost patterns," Professor Sharp says, "it is evident that they are controlled in some way by temperature, the amount of moisture present and other factors."

DOGS USED FOR OUTPOST SERVICE IN FRENCH ARMY

By International News Service

PARIS—Dogs, which give warning of the presence of an enemy by a low growl, are used extensively for outpost duty in the French Army.

There are numbers of troops whose special job is to train and accompany the dogs.

When a patrol goes out towards enemy territory two of these dogs go with it. One is left in charge of a soldier half way between the advance patrol and the base while the other goes forward.

When necessity arises the latter animal is sent back with a message fixed to a metal tube attached to its collar, while the second dog is sent forward to join the reconnoitering party.

YOUR HEALTH

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Selected Patients

My colleagues in the United States are terribly perturbed about the possibilities of socialized medicine. It might comfort my fellow physicians to see how smoothly it works in Mexico, where I saw many things of medical interest on my recent southern jaunt.

There was a phantasy in one of Samuel Butler's notebooks which described a topsy-turvy situation in which, instead of cook applying to housewives for positions, the mistresses applied to the cooks. And the understanding and good-tempered mistress got the beautiful and accomplished cook. In our land the patients select their physicians, and the physicians do not always want the ones they get. But in enlightened Mexico the physicians select their patients, and they are allowed to treat the diseases in which they are most interested.

I noticed what I thought was a very sensible attitude of the Mexican laborer to fatigue. I saw an old man carrying a bundle on his head, and all of a sudden the "afternoon let-down" seemed to get him. He just squatted down in a doorway, rested his bundle, and fell fast asleep. I understand that here, up north, the idea prevails in some offices that when the afternoon let-down occurs, the office force is mustered and put through some exercises to wake them up. The poor things go back to work even more tired than before the restorative was applied. How much better it would be, instead of further fatiguing them or recommending a jolt of some awakening concoction, at the soda fountain to provide couches for them and allow a 20-minute snooze! I wager the work would be done twice as well after that as after an exercise period.

Sanctuary Offered To Nazi Refugees
By International News Service
A new life, free of oppression and persecution, has been promised to 500 families from persecuted European minorities by General Rafael Leonidas Trujillo, once known as the dictator of the Dominican Republic. Under terms of an agreement signed in Ciudad Trujillo, the refugees will settle immediately on 24,000 acres of land donated by Trujillo near Sosua, and will be granted full citizenship. The settlers will include both Jews and non-Jews. Not only will their entry fee be waived, but they will be allowed to bring in equipment and tools duty free. The contract was signed in the presence of James N. Rosenberg, New York attorney and president of the Dominican Republic Settlement Association.

May Reach 100,000
It is proposed that up to 100,000 refugees eventually be granted haven on the island. Economic experts doubt that the republic, equal in size to Vermont and New Hampshire combined, can accommodate that many, but believe that it can accept 25,000 comfortably.

Sugar, cocoa and tobacco are the chief products of the fertile island, with 15,500 of its 19,325 square miles arable. The land contains gold, copper, iron, salt, coal and petroleum, but the mining industry is undeveloped, and it is hoped this is one of the industries which the refugees will help build up. The population of 1,500,000 is a race of mixed European, African and Indian blood, speaking the Spanish language. Education is compulsory.

Title Changed
Trujillo was first made president of the republic in 1934 and soon became known as its dictator. Because of his reforms, which put the backward land in the front-rank of Latin-American countries, the congress changed his title to Benefactor. At expiration of his second term in 1938, Trujillo decided to rest on that title alone and his selected successor, Jacinto B. Peynado, was elected president by 95 per cent of the vote. By law, however, the Benefactor is co-equal with the president and in actual fact Trujillo continues to conduct all the important business of the republic.

The Stars Say—

For Friday, Feb. 23

A rather conflicting state of affairs is the prevailing mood on the part of the stars. While there will be much activity, with high-tension initiative and aggressive energies under the line, there are minor oppositions or small obstacles with which to cope. The prospects are good for success in most projects if keen mentality is exercised and backed up by strategy and tact rather than force. Those whose birthday it is may be assured of a year of satisfactory progress in creative and new channels with major projects moving under fine energies and a versatile mental impetus. There may be some delays, obstacles and oppositions, but in the long run there should be much accomplishment resulting from sagacious moves rather than force. A child born on this day may be excellently endowed with qualities, forces and facilities for success and a productive life. Its mental equipment is of a high order ingenious and inventive resourceful and canny.

Daily Pattern for Home Use

BY ANNE ADAMS

STYLE NEWS IN KIDDER DRESS

PATTERN 4396

Never too young to heed the fashion says this chic frock for a very small belle. Depending on the fabric you use, Anne Adams Pattern 4396 makes either dress-up style or a school dress. The long, double-front panels curve out smartly on top to follow the line of the side bodice sections. Buttons may be sewn on for accents while lace is dainty at the round neck and the neatly tucked sleeves. For an everyday style, let the back skirt form just a simple panel. But when you make up the party version, have a dashing shirred panel for back-finish. If you like, the entire back skirt and the side front skirt sections may contrast the dress. Neat panties are included in the pattern.

Pattern 4396 is available in children's sizes 4, 6, 8, 10 and 12. Size 6 takes 2 yards 3/4 inch fabric. Send fifteen cents (15c) in coins for this Anne Adams pattern. Write plainly, give name, address and style number.

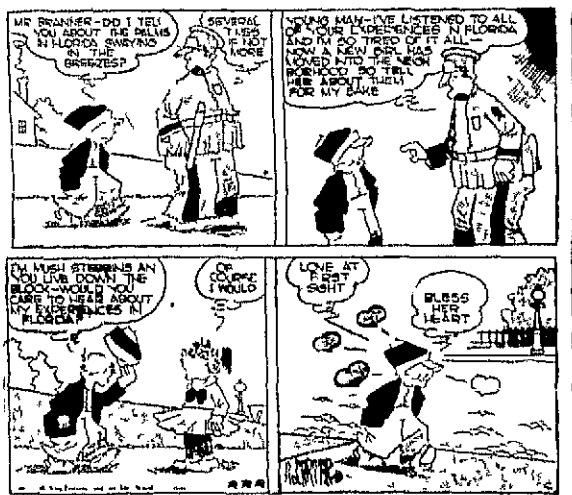

Capture spring enchantment with a wardrobe selected from our Anne Adams spring pattern book. It interprets the gay and lovely new styles in colorful clothes for tots, teens and twenties. It includes dresses for the business girl, smart frocks for the woman past forty, an exquisite costume for the bride and appealing new fashions in prints and cottons. All available in easy-to-sew patterns. Book fifteen cents. Pattern fifteen cents. Book and Pattern together twenty five cents.
